Schools enjoy Literacy Nights at Wayne County Historical Museum

RICHMOND, IN September 26, 2017 – This month, all six of Richmond Community Schools' elementary buildings hosted Literacy Nights at the Wayne County Historical Museum. The literacy nights helped families and teachers connect in a relaxed setting, interested kids in history, encouraged return visits to the museum and by putting free books into the hands of our students.

When a Literacy Night is scheduled, all of our school's students are invited to attend a special program in the early evening hours when the museum is open just for them. Students go from station to station for hands-on activities throughout the museum at 1150 North A Street, Richmond.

Students are encouraged to invite their entire families to participate, and some school offer food to help busy parents fit the event into their schedules.

Last year, RCS Literacy Nights, brought in more than 1,400 students and family members to the Wayne County Historical Museum.
